H.E.R.O. Designed by John Van Ryzin

Need a hero? Here's R. Hero. Resourceful, inventive, fearless. Founder of H.E.R.O. (Helicopter Emergency Rescue Operations). A no-nonsense kind of guy. Kind to ladies, kind to pets, the kind who straps a Prop Pack onto his back and flies through volcanic mineshafts like a human helicopter to rescue stranded miners. Your kind of guy.

Where Has David Crane's Imagination Taken Him Now?

PITFALL II™

LOST CAVERNS

As seen on
CBS Saturday Supercade.™

For the Atari® 2600™ and coming soon for the other systems.

We last left Pitfall Harry swinging through the world's deepest jungles. But now you and he are headed for even deeper adventure: the Lost Caverns of the Incas.

The Incas—lost civilization of Peru. Pitfall Harry journeys into a secret subterranean world, accompanied by his niece, Rhonda, and Quickclaw, his faithful but cowardly mountain lion. Their goal: to recover the celebrated Raj Diamond, stolen a century before and hidden inside the infinite caverns.

Danger? Bats. Poisonous frogs. Condors. Electric eels. Albino scorpions. The dreaded cave rat. Once they've entered the lost caverns, no man, niece or lion has ever returned.

High adventure? Hundreds of towering cliffhanging ledges. Blind leaps across bottomless voids. Pitfall II heightens the meaning of the word vertigo.

Excitement? See for yourself.

Pitfall Harry, wearing the latest in swim fashion, cascades down a waterfall into a raging river filled with electric eels. Nobody said finding gold would be easy (at least they're not piranha). Note the irritable scorpion with the lousy suntan.

Enjoying the vacation of a lifetime, Pitfall Harry is shown here playing tag with some friends—carnivorous condors, poisonous frogs, a cave bat or two. 216 unromantic caves, connected by ladders and long jumps. Wish you were here.

Helium / 'he-le-əm / n.: a light colorless gaseous element used chiefly for inflating airships and brightly-colored balloons so that Pitfall Harry can rise to the occasion. Steering the balloon into a cave bat, it pops and Pitfall Harry lands on higher ground. Ta-da.

Add up cool, daring, pluck, stamina and true grit. What do you get? At least 99,000 points, the grudging respect of Pitfall Harry, and a membership emblem for the Activision Cliffhangers. Courage is its own reward.

What does David Crane have in common with David Bowie? If you said first names, you haven't heard the soundtrack to Pitfall II: Lost Caverns. Three musical tracks, plus percussion. Maybe Pitfall Harry will run on MTV.

You're going to need it. Hidden deep inside this word puzzle are at least 14 new elements in Pitfall II that are different from Pitfall Harry's first adventure. Can you find and circle them? Don't peek at the solution.
